What's the most important ingredient in effective writing?
Brilliant ideas? Catchy headlines? Zippy style?

No, no and no. The single most important step in the writing process isn't even in the writing.

It's editing.

Once you've poured your efforts into your writing, you're too close to the subject to see your mistakes, and that's when embarrassing things can slip past you. When your reader stumbles on those mistakes, all your brilliance, catchiness and zip can dissolve in an instant, taking your credibility with them.

I'll scrutinize your documents for grammar, punctuation, organization and flow. Let's make sure your ideas shine through with clear, correct communication.

- Substantive editing
- Copy editing
- Proofreading
- AP, Chicago, MLA and APA styles
